From the Diary of A Hudson's Bay Clerk in the Seventies CHASE OF A GRIZZLY BEAR—LOVE PHILTRES.

By O. G. MAS-ES (Little Clark).

(Copyrighted)

In a former article entitled "Swan River to York Factory" I had described the unique situation of Shoal River, where the northern end of Swan Lake, the Swan River, ends in the south side of the lake. Here at the mouth of the river was a small settlement of half-breeds and Indians. It was the autumn of 1874 and Mr. Angus Beth, who had been sent in charge of the post, had advanced some Indians rather heavily. These men were living at Duck Bay on Lake Winnipegosis, and he did not see them before his departure, but he wired to Mr. Beth that he had impressed on them the importance of collecting these debts at all possible, as there was an ugly rum current in H. B. C. circles that postmen were to be made responsible for outstanding accounts.

Being very busy getting the brigade of eight boats off to York, and then having other matters to attend to, it was not well with him that he was unable to make the time to collect these debts. There were no men at the post, except my cook, Murdo, and after impressing on him to be extra careful of the company's property, my absence, I was able to get and pack up some provisions and paddled over to the mouth of Swan River. Here I was fortunate in securing a very dark Indian, known as Black Bat'see, who knew the country, but was not a half-breed, which did not impress on them, was no particular rush. We left my small bark and took his double canoe, paddled across to the east side of the lake, caught one canoe, made up a light drigate commanded by a half-breed, and had some trouble in getting into a beaver hole in a beaver shot pouch in case of sightig any game. I was some distance ahead making for a ridge which promised shelter, when I heard a shot, and the drigate, going in our direction and evidently very fresh. The tracks are very much like a human foot, only the heel is narrower and the claws make deeper indents. Just as I reached the shot hole in the beaver shot pouch, I heard a handful, something moved right ahead of me, and as I crouched and stared it resolved itself into a large grizzly colored bear with his hand quiverswards and his forepaws were a dead man's hand. He was a monster all right and my hair stood up with excitement. Tugging at the string of my shot pouch, I pulled them into a hard knot, and while I was getting at the gun, he sprang at me and I stood facing me. Such a brute, taller than I, and no doubt the one I had just tracked. It was too late to get my bullets, so without thinking I pulled out a revolver and shot both barrels aiming at his heart. Snap, snap, they went, the caps evidently damp with the rain, though I had the nipples covered. The bear wailed and dashed off into the bushes. I took a humpack, threw it over my shoulders and ran after him. Bat'see throwing off his pack ran after me shouting: "Stop, Ogemase, stop! Dog, bear, bear!" For a hundred yards or so I ran him down, and then I heard him stop and stood facing me. Such a brute, taller than I, and no doubt the one I had just tracked. It was too late to get my bullets, so without thinking I pulled out a revolver and shot both barrels aiming at his heart. Snap, snap, they went, the caps evidently damp with the rain, though I had the nipples covered. The bear wailed and dashed off into the bushes. I took a humpack, threw it over my shoulders and ran after him. Bat'see throwing off his pack ran after me shouting: "Stop, Ogemase, stop! Dog, bear, bear!"

"Dog, what do you eat you mean? Good heavens, no!" "Well," was his grinning reply, "that is what we are going to have for dinner." Bat'see was right, and I had shot him, receiving helpings of what I must say looked like very nice meat, and gathering up, course I tasted it, and there was nothing wrong about it. Still, there was the idea, to eat a bear, and I was shocked. Our host, noting that I was not enjoying my dinner, spoke to one of the girls, who shortly entered the tepee and placed beside it a splendid dish of ripe raspberries, it being berry season, that the bear had been in fact, ate me, and I gazed and gazed at it. White, with yellow stripes, handle and all, the kind of skin that is generally kept under the bed. Bat'see, seeming to be right, and I said, "It is all right, he has only been used for cooking, not what you think," and with that my suspicions were relieved and I made a hearty meal off the berries.

After our repast with all its surprises I went fully into the question of trade. The amount due the company

Citizens of Allied Countries Given a Preference Over Others.

Particulars of the facilities available to citizens of foreign countries have been issued by the government. A distinction has been drawn between the citizens of Allied countries and former enemy nations in these regulations. In the past all visitors, remaining in Canada for two weeks, have been compelled to show identification cards at police headquarters. Under the new plan such a card shall be required only of the visitor intending to stay two months. A French visa for the passage of allied visitors leaving a French port is no longer necessary.
